Full Moon Impact

Impact is in Sagittarius, so we can expect:

- Passionate energy for what you believe
- Need for more space and freedom, especially if feeling restricted/limited
- Wanting experiences for the emotional growth and personal impact they can have
- Sharing wisdom
- Seeing the results of big ideas and big risks (paying off or setting you back)
- Speaking up if you've been holding back
- Generally more positive than a usual Full Moon

Most impactful for you personally in the areas of life ruled by the house in your natal chart the Full Moon occurs.

Extra: The ruler, Jupiter, will be at a critical degree (17 degrees Sagittarius) June 22nd - 30th, so there can be extra emotional energy, excess, and laziness. Practice moderation and maintain perspective.

General impact of the Moon in Sagittarius (bolded is what's more likely with the Full Moon):

When the Moon is in Sagittarius, we're extremely optimistic and positive about life, feeling everything is going great, a contrast to the previous few days. We want to expand our consciousness, and spending time learning something new, studying a philosophy or culture, or jet-setting to some foreign land is great now. We want adventures, we want to travel, and we yearn to be free. There are no fences that can hold us in and no limit to how high we can fly. We don't want to be bothered with day-to-day duties, choosing fun and play over work and practical matters. The little things matter less than the big things now, so it's not a good time for decision-making. Sagittarius is active, high energy, and likes to spend time outdoors, doing something (whereas Taurus likes to be outdoors observing and being one with nature – Sagittarius just wants the open spaces to roam free and fresh air!). Spontaneity is good, and overall, we're just looking for a good time. This isn't a period to focus on the seriousness of life; it's a time to joke about its kookiness and relish in its joy. We can tend to go overboard with this Moon, being too indulgent and avoiding responsibilities. Running off to Bangkok on a whim is fine if you don't have anyone to take care of and have the money to blow, but how many of us fall in that category? Maybe stick to something local.

General Interpretations for Full Moons in the Houses (bolded is what's more likely with a Sagittarius Full Moon):

Full Moon in the 1st House

A Full Moon in the house of the self can force you to evaluate yourself, life, and priorities, and figure out what needs to stay and what needs to be gotten rid of. You may find you need to focus on yourself and on how you can harmoniously blend your own needs with the needs of others. You may desire more attention from others, but don't be so needy about it. You can get the attention you crave from positive means, and always remember to be respectful of others. Full Moons tend to be more emotional than New Moons, so you may find yourself feeling your emotions more intensely, bringing everything out of you and right to the surface. Depending on how you handle it, that may be a good thing or a bad thing. Try to think through carefully what you're feeling before losing your cool. Your surroundings may seem off-kilter, but that could just be your perspective being more influenced by your emotional state. Since Full Moons are all about endings, this is also a good time to finish things. Anything that is missing a conclusion or needs a few extra touches can be done now.

Full Moon in the 2nd House

When a Full Moon occurs in the 2nd House, this can affect your finances. You could finish paying something off or finish a financial project, or have a change in earnings. Watch your spending, as you may be more inclined to overdo it, indulging on something that perhaps you don't need, but makes you feel better in the moment. This house also rules self esteem and values. You could be confronted with your feelings about yourself and evaluate your own worth. How much value you believe you have, materially and intrinsically, and how much more you feel you should have can be issues that are presented. Let others know what you have and what you've accomplished in your career, family, or life, but resist the urge to rub it in. Instead, use it to show others the right path the take to get what they want by illustrating the road you took. You may want to clearly define what you own, possess, and have power over, and what is clearly out of your domain. What your needs are seem more important, and you could focus on what exactly it is you need to feel secure, stable, safe, comfortable.

Full Moon in the 3rd House

With a Full Moon in the 3rd House, you could have to deal with a sibling, perhaps ending a spat, reconnecting with them, or elevating the relationship. You may have to deal with something in your community, like finishing a community project, or making a change to improve your close environment. You could also have to deal with communications; you could have a hard time getting your point across or understanding others. People may be coming at you left and right trying to get you to understand something, and it may be overwhelming to you. Unexpected appointments could come up, so make sure you stay flexible, or you might become overworked and exhausted. Life may seem a bit amped up right now, and you're being pulled in a million different directions. Focus on what needs to be worked on now, and leave everything else for later. It's okay to let yourself off the hook sometimes. You feelings and your words may be tied together, so if you can get through the tangled web and sort it all out, this is a good time to let others know exactly how you're feeling and have them really hear you.

Full Moon in the 4th House

The home and family could be the source of endings with a Full Moon in the 4th House. You finish a project with the house, or settle a problem in the family. If you've been spending too much time at home or at work, you may desire trying to equal the amount of time you spend between the two, and not neglecting either. The realization that there's no point in a personal life if your professional life is a mess and vice versa could come about now. You may feel the need to detach and spend some time alone, but it's a better use of energy if you open yourself to others and connect. Taking a break from the home and getting out for a while could be useful. The Fourth House is also a spiritual, karmic house, so a Full Moon here could present situations where there is a feeling of destiny or karma. You could be focused on where you're going in life and how you'll get there, and whether or not you're even on the right road to start with. An opportune moment could arise, one that makes you scratch your head and go, "Maybe I need to think this over."

Full Moon in the 5th House

The Fifth House is the house of love, romance, and fun. A Full Moon here could show the end of a creative venture or hobby project you've been working on. You could see the completion of a love affair or heightening of one. If you break up with someone, it most likely will be one of those things that was a long time coming. You may not want to be alone with this placement though, so a quick rebound fling may come about. If you're in a happy relationship, then this can be a time of bringing it to a new, more exciting, more pleasurable level. Going out and having fun is important now, and you may not feel very inclined to getting anything done that isn't fun. You're more enthusiastic, passionate, and spontaneous, so watch what you do carefully if you don't want to go overboard. Sometimes it's okay to wake up with a stranger in your bed, but it's almost never okay to wake up with a goat. Work may be on the backburner, so don't commit yourself to any big projects, otherwise you'll be ripping out your hair and teeth and nails trying to get it done, yearning to be out and about and living it up. It's a good time to let out your inner child and be more carefree.

Full Moon in the 6th House

A Full Moon in the 6th House could show the end of a health problem or habit that you've been trying to break. You may decide to make a change with your health suddenly, but you have a better chance of making it if you've been planning it for a while and not if you decide on a whim to do it now. You could change your work environment; if dissatisfied with your work life, you'll probably have a strong desire to quit. Make sure you have a plan in place if you do – being a professional bum doesn't work out as well as you'd think. On a more positive note, you could finish a work project that you've been slaving away at. Your routine may seem more mundane to you than ever, and your desire to make a change may be higher than ever, so if you do make a change, make sure it's a positive one that you'll be able to stick with long-term. Don't be overly emotional and crazed if you can't make the sudden, overwhelming changes you crave at the moment. Be happy with a little. Bring some order into your life (or some chaos if you're too neat). The 6th House rules your pets, so you could also have something come up with them.

Full Moon in the 7th House

When a Full Moon occurs in the 7th House of relationships, you may evaluate your relationships and your partner to see if it's still working right. It's a good time to walk away, if you choose to, or to bring your relationship to a deeper level. If you're dealing with people that you view as equal to you, then you may want to stand back a little and let them have the spotlight. Especially in a business situation, if you've been working with a partner and things are culminating right now, you'll want to enjoy the rewards. Singles who have their eye on someone may find that now is the time to jump-start a connection. The feelings you have for them may seem more intense now, and you may find it easier to express your emotions with a partner, in a one-on-one setting. You'll also be more inclined to be fully interested in their feelings and needs, and you may want to accommodate them however you can. This is a good time to negotiate with others, as you'll be more able to see compromise that can please you both. The 7th House also rules 'open' enemies, those you know about, so something could come up along those lines as well.

Full Moon in the 8th House

With a Full Moon in the 8th House, there's a good chance you'll have to transform something in your life, and usually something on a deep level. Releasing something that is bogging down your life can allow you to restart your life more positively. Most of us hold onto things that become unhealthy for us after a period of time, not wanting to let it go and allowing it to become like a safety blanket, but now is the time to liberate yourself. The transformation could also be something physical, like renovating a part of your house or restoring something to its former glory. Dealing with intimacy and security may be more of a focus. Issues related to other people's money could come up, and you may have to use a large chunk of money, perhaps lending some money to a friend or family member, or you may settle an outstanding debt. If you're in need of a loan or want another credit card, this is a good time to get it, provided it's what you really need and not just what you want. You may evaluate the things you own that aren't only yours. More serious topics may be on your mind with this aspect.

Full Moon in the 9th House (house that naturally connects to Sagittarius so doubles the energy)

If a Full Moon occurs in your 9th House, you could feel more connected with your spirituality. Growing more from a spiritual perspective and realizing how your belief system affects who you are as a person could come about with this placement. If you find it affects you positively, you may explore it even further, dedicating your life even more to it; if you find it affects you negatively, you may scrap it altogether and start fresh. The growth could instead be centered in your mind, and you could finish a program of study or a writing project. Growing mentally often leads to growing personally and you may feel the connection between your mind and spirit much stronger now. If you have a legal dealing, there could be a complication, or it could end, especially if it's been drawn out. Your view of the world may be something you want to expand, forcing you to open yourself to new ideas and broadening your imagination. You may feel you absolutely have to do this, and in areas where you're already opening yourself, you'll see the greatest progress. You may feel more open to having fun, but usually in an adventurous way, or one that allows you to learn something, and less on fun that's just about being social without a purpose.

Full Moon in the 10th House

Your career and life path could be affected by a Full Moon in the 10th House. You may do something that gives you more attention than normal, and has people wanting you and no one else for the job. It's difficult to hide yourself now, and you probably don't want to.

Promoting yourself may be good for your career, so if you deem it to be, this is the time to put yourself out there and let others know of your accomplishments. You could decide to go in a new direction, sometimes quite suddenly, or be offered something that makes you rethink the path you're on. Evaluating your commitment to your long-term goals and whether or not your goals will give you the success you want can come up with this placement. Authority figures can be a source of frustration, whether it's a boss or a parent, and if you've been behaving badly, your social status could take a hit. Make sure you're watching yourself in public so that you don't offend someone or make yourself look like a fool by accident. Things that have been hanging on far past their due date could have the cord cut now.

Full Moon in the 11th House

The 11th House rules your friends, so a Full Moon here could bring an end of something you're working on with a friend, an argument, or cutting ties. You could also elevate the relationship you have with good friends, spending time with one another and enjoying each other's company. Go out to a small restaurant and talk and laugh for hours. Material things may seem less important right now, with focus going towards your friendly relationships. If you just let go a little, you may find things happening with little effort around you. Let the surrounding energy take care of things for you, even if just for a few hours. You could walk away from a group you belong to or join a new one that you feel better represents what you want to accomplish and has members that are of the same mind in regards to how to better the world and society. Your position in the world and how you fit in could be something you reflect on. Someone may require your help, or you may be surrounded by many more people than you have been in quite some time. You could second guess your dreams for the future, share them with others, or dive deeper into them.

Full Moon in the 12th House

A Full Moon in the 12th House can force you to deal with subconscious problems. It's a good time for therapy. You may be tempted to suppress your emotions, but that could just lead to more problems or a breakdown. Things that you keep hidden deep inside of you could bubble to the surface. Allowing yourself to get in touch with your internal issues can be good, and during this time you may find you're better able to deal with them and heal. Being alone may be the best thing for you to do at this time, reflecting, digging deep, and recharging. You don't feel much like being in the spotlight anyhow, and want to stay in the background. You may seem more docile as well, not feeling much like getting into it with people right now. Get plenty of sleep, and watch those dreams. They may be even more lucid, acting out everything that you're experiencing but can't voice. Just don't confuse dream with reality too much; they're not literal, but figurative representations of our emotions. If they're a lot of bad or weird stuff, you're stressing too much and need to relax. Helping others can make you feel better, especially in situations where you're dealing with them directly.
